The Lightner Museum located in St. Augustine, Florida, is filled with oddities and antiquities. From an Egyptian mummy, a menagerie of crystals and minerals, shrunken heads, Tiffany & Co. stained glass, even Sir. Winston Churchill's lion is on display. Even the building has a historical past. The "Lightner Museum is housed in the former Alcazar Hotel built in 1888 by Henry Flagler."ⁱ Noted for being a destination vacation spot for the rich and famous with its Turkish steam baths and for housing at the time the world's largest indoor swimming pool. People flocked to St. Augustine, Florida to escape the harsh winters of the north. Today the Lightner is still a vacation destination spot. However, instead of a resort, it is now a beautiful unique museum. "Today it is home to one of the finest collections of fine and decorative 19th-century art in the country."ⁱⁱ Through every corridor visitors are shown glimpses of the gilded age. Since 1888, the Lightner has seen many changes. Ongoing renovations along with hosting traveling art shows keep the collection fresh and visitors coming in.

Though the Lightner does not offer guests audio tours, or own monitors to highlight the exhibit, they prefer the old fashion hands-on approach. Stationed within each room is a volunteer who is knowledgeable about the different items on display. Visitors also have a choice of participating in a docent lead tours, and at 11 AM and 2 PM daily there is a music demonstration. In "The Music Room, which is filled with instruments produced between the 1870s and 1920s, is one of the museum's most popular exhibits. During the music demonstration, some of the instruments from the collection are played, along with a background of the instruments and a history of the museum."ⁱⁱⁱ Though the Lightner has not started making technological changes to their exhibit yet. There are plans to in the future. Currently, the way that they connect with their visitors is through different social media platforms such as Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter. On each of the different apps, a visitor can see upcoming events and other visitors' experiences.

Recently the Lightner has been awarded “a $25,000 grant awarded by the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) to improve its fourth-floor collection storage space. IMLS is the primary source of federal support for the nation’s 123,000 libraries and 35,000 museums. The Lightner Museum is 1 of 132 projects chosen to receive funding. Only 24 percent of this funding cycle’s 558 applicants were selected.”^{iv} At this time the Lightner is exploring different grants such as the “Inspire! Grants for Small Museums” offered by IMLS. This grant is for museums to “promote lifelong learning, community anchors and catalysts, and assist with collection stewardship and public access.” (Inspire! Grants for Small Museums, 2019) Their plan is to start incorporating new technology into the exhibits. Such as supplying QR codes, digitizing records, even offering visitors an AI experience.

Over the last 131 years, the Lightner Museum has been evolving to fit the needs of its visitors. They have provided years of entertainment and exploration through their collection. No longer just a brick and mortar facility, the Lightner has branched out through social media networks to help better connect with visitors. Through grants, they are actively protecting their collection as they seek out new ways to make it fully accessible. The dedicated staff and volunteers of the Lightner Museum continue their diligent efforts to remind visitors that learning is indeed fun, and you never know what to expect when you come and visit.
